CERAMIC TILES

Different Types of Ceramic Tiles

PORCELAIN TILE

Porcelain ceramic tile is a type of ceramic tile known for its durability and versatility. It is made from a mixture of fine clay and other natural materials, which are then fired at extremely high temperatures. The high firing process creates a dense and hardwearing tile that is highly resistant to water, stains, and scratches.

CERAMIC TILE

Ceramic floor tile is a type of tile specifically designed for use on floors. It is made from clay and other natural materials, similar to porcelain ceramic tiles. However, there are some differences between the two.

WALL TILE

Ceramic Wall Tile is a type of tile specifically designed for installation on walls. Like ceramic floor tiles, it is made from clay and other natural materials. However, there are some differences in the characteristics and properties of wall tiles compared to floor tiles.

SPC ,UV BOARD & WPC PANEL

Stone Plastic Composite(SPC) Flooring

SPC (stone plastic composite) is designed to replace traditional flooring materials such as stone, ceramic, or wood. SPC flooring is a type of vinyl flooring with a rigid core that is primarily made from natural limestone powder.

UV Board

UV coated boards are materials produced by curing acrylic with Ultra Violet rays, and they are a suitable replacement for conventional wall systems.

WPC Panel

WPC Ceiling is a lightweight plastic material with a gleaming and smooth surface on each panel. WPC (Wood-Plastic Composite) panels are durable, eco-friendly decorative materials blending wood fibers, thermoplastics, and additives. Ideal for indoor/outdoor walls and ceilings, they are waterproof, termite-proof, and fire-retardant. These low-maintenance, easy-to-install panels offer modern aesthetics, including fluted and marble-effect designs.
